9.3 Mood Particles

Mood—indicating particles are used to add various moods, spirits and tones to an utterance. “Mood” includes such diverse qualities as interrogation, request, command, emphasis, and exclamation. Some Chinese grammatologists classify mood particles as an independent part of speech, calling them “mood words.” Two distinctive features of mood particles are their position, typically at the end of a sentence or phrase, and their tone—they are usually read in the neutral tone. (In HP, consequently, they are never marked with tones.) The intonation of a sentence, which in Putonghua usually rests largely on the final syllable of an utterance, is in the case of a particle—final sentence transferred to the penultimate syllable.

Mood particles are always written separately from other components of a sentence. In the following paragraphs, we will look at the usage and written forms of some of the more common mood particles of Putonghua.

1) a 啊

This very common mood particle is used to express emotion, affirmation, interrogation, and other moods. In speech, its pronunciation is partially determined by the final of the syllable preceding it. After -a, -e, -i, -o, or -u, a 啊 is pronounced “ya”呀; after -u, “wa”哇; and after -n, “na”哪. These different pronunciations are conventionally represented by the different characters seen here; in HP, however, a single “a” is used to represent them all.

a 啊 may be used to express admiration:

Duōme méi de Xī Hú a! 多么美的西湖啊! (How lovely West Lake is!).

a 啊 may also be used to express affirmation, explanation, or to call someone’s attention to something:

Nǐ shuō de zhēn bùcuò a! 你说得真不错啊! (You said it!);
Wǒ bù shì bù guǎn, méi hǎo bānzhōu a! 我不是不管，没好办法呀! (It’s not that I don’t care, but there’s nothing I can do about it!);
Xiǎo Wáng, nǐ kě yào dāngxīn a! 小王，你可要当心啊! (Be careful, Xiao Wang!).

a 啊 may also be used interrogatively:

Shuí a? Nǐ zěnme bù jìnlaì a? 谁呀? 你怎么不进来呀? (Who is it? Why don’t you come on inside?).

a 啊 may also be used to indicate a pause, or to separate items in a list:

9.4 Interjections

Interjections, sometimes also called exclamations, are a type of function word used in calling out, to express strong emotions, or to indicate agreement. Interjections may form complete utterances on their own, or function as part of a larger utterance. When they form a part of a larger sentence, they most usually appear at the beginning. They are separated from the rest of the sentence by a comma or exclamation point in writing.

Interjections can tolerate a wide degree of variation in tone and intonation in order to better express the emotions they indicate. This makes it difficult to set a fixed Chinese-character form for each different interjection. To better suit this variability, inter-
